THESSALONIKI, Greece – As war ravages in Ukraine and people worldwide battle the challenges of Covid, the historic city of Thessaloniki in northern Greece will host the launch of a landmark art exhibition and conference, “Art Communicating Conflict Resolution,” from June 29 through July 1, featuring the work of 39 internationally-renowned artists.

With the support of Thessaloniki Mayor Konstantinos Zervas and Thessaloniki Deputy Mayor of Culture and Tourism Maria Karagianni, the art exhibition will open on June 29 at the Casa Bianca, home to the Municipal Art Gallery of Thessaloniki and run through July 31, 2022. Its theme is based on the book, Can Art Aid in Resolving Conflicts? (Frame Publishers, 2018), which features many of the artists in the exhibit. The exhibition is being promoted with a social media campaign, #ConflictAndArt.

The three-day schedule includes:

- Day 1 – Wednesday, June 29, 2022, 7:30 PM – The exhibition opening will take place at the Casa Bianca Municipal Art Gallery of Thessaloniki, with Mayor Konstantinos Zervas opening the exhibit, followed by a reception in the beautiful garden of the Casa Bianca, Municipal Gallery of Thessaloniki (Δημοτική Πινακοθήκη Θεσσαλονίκης).

- Day 2 – Thursday, June 30, 2022, 10 AM - 4 PM – We will hold a one-day conference sponsored by the UNESCO Hellenic National Commission, UNESCO Chair of Intercultural Policy for an Active Citizenship and Solidarity, University of Macedonia, Thessaloniki, United Nations Regional Information Center for Western Europe, with the theme, “Art Communicating Conflict Resolution: An Intercultural Dialogue,” with a break for lunch. A garden dinner will follow for conference guests and other invitees at the Hyatt Regency Hotel with live music.

- Day 3 – Friday, July 1, 2022, 10 AM - 1 PM – We will offer organized visits and tours of the historic Thessaloniki, including museums, Byzantine churches, the Jewish Museum of Thessaloniki, archeological museums and sites. We will finish with lunch at Aristotelous square.
- 3-day weekend – We will explore the neighboring peninsula of Halkidiki, its historic sites and natural beauty.

Casa Bianca was constructed in 1911 by factory owner Dino Fernandez Diaz, a member of the local Jewish community captured and killed in Italy by German forces, and the exhibition – a century after the villa’s construction – will feature the work of three Jewish artists. The conference will also feature a respected israeli academic, Noam Latar, coeditor of the book, Can Art Aid in Resolving Conflicts? Prof. Latar will participate in the conference, along with art and academic leaders in Thessaloniki.

The 39 artists in the exhibition include: activist and multimedia artist Adeela Suleman from Pakistan, renowned journalist, author and activist Asra Q. Nomani, born in India and living in the United States, and media artist Dor Guez from Israel. They also include: architect and educator Theodore Spyropoulos from the United Kingdom, Maria Karametou from the United States, and Valerio Rocco Orlando from Italy.

The exhibition also features artists from Greece and Cyprus, including: audiovisual and installation artist Eleni Fotiadou, painter Yiannis Fokas, and digital artist Babis Venetopoulos from Thessaloniki, and artists Melina Shukuroglou, Vicky Pericleous, and Efi Savvides from Cyprus. And, in a special feature, the exhibition includes a collection of photographs from eight artists from Oman.

“Exhibitions are a vehicle to foster communication and understanding between people, as well as resolve conflict,” said Vasia Deliyianni, curator of the exhibition and an artist and educator, based in Washington, D.C. “Art has always been the common language of all people and all nations, the peaceful way to address concerns and problems, and, therefore, yes, art can be the key to conflict resolution. It is my deepest wish that art will continue to be one of the paths to peace -- the peace that is much needed right now everywhere: around us, externally, as well as inside us, internally.”

Sophia Hiniadou Cambanis, an attorney and cultural policy and management advisor at the Hellenic Parliament and a conference speaker, said: “Conflict prevention and resolution have been part of human experience for centuries. Aeschylus’ tragedy Eumenides, final part of the Oresteia trilogy, is the earliest ancient Greek text to narrate the resolution of a large-scale conflict. The Greek legacy was transmitted to us through the privileged cultural display of ancient Greek drama: the myth and the scenic art. Theatre was a key element for the self-awareness of the community. Democracy and theater – and by extension all creative culture – are totally bound.”

The work of the late South African leader Nelson Mandela. In July 2001, Mr. Mandela sketched five powerful images of hands, depicting, he said, how the world “joined hands across social divides and national boundaries, between continents and over oceans,” to resolve conflict. Almost two decades later, Mandela’s “Struggle Series” lithographs will be showcased for the second time in Greece in this powerful, groundbreaking new exhibition in Thessaloniki. Mr. Mandela’s work was first featured in the first Conflict and Art exhibition in Athens in 2019.

The new exhibition will also feature a painting by South African artist Esther Mahlangu and the works of more than 30 additional international artists, exploring the critical role of art as soft power in resolving conflict.

The book, “Can Art Aid in Resolving Conflicts,” is a collaboration between Professor Latar, Founding Dean of the Sammy Ofer School of Communications at IDC Herzliya in Israel, Jerry Wind, Lauder Professor and Professor of Marketing at The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and Dr. Ornat Lev-Er, an art historian at IDC Herzliya.

Professor Latar said, “The book, Can Art Aid in Resolving Conflicts, represents a pioneering survey of more than 100 global leading and young artists, curators and museum directors exploring the power of art to play a constructive role in creating bridges among groups in conflict.”

“At a time when humanity has been so challenged with social distancing and fear of an invisible virus, this exhibit empowers all of us to connect through art,” said journalist Ms. Nomani. “The city of Thessaloniki has sat at the crossroads of civilizations and today it graciously opens the doors of the historic Casa Bianca to amplify the voices of courageous artists, thought leaders, activists and humanitarians who are using art to communicate and connect.”

The book was first launched at the Barnes Foundation in Philadelphia in November 2018 and was recently launched in Rome and Tel Aviv, in London and in Athens in 2019. The book is available online and in museum bookshops in the U.S. and Europe as well as at the Benaki Museum in Athens..
